BERKELEY, May, 1884.

You are cordially invited to attend the Loan Exhibition of Books, illustrative of the History of Printing, to be held in the University Library, at Berkeley, during the last week in May.

Through the kindness of private collectors and the heads of public libraries, many of the choicest literary treasures owned in California have been brought together and will be open to public inspection.

The collection will embrace manuscripts, block-books, incunabula or fifteenth century books, and rare, curious or remarkable examples of the typography of later periods.

The progress and varieties of Book Illustration will be fully exemplified, and numerous specimens of fine Bindings will be exhibited.

The exhibition will be open in the daytime only, from 9 o'clock A. M., until 6 o'clock P. M.
